

Talking Trash

Acting as a sister program to Keep Charleston Beautiful's Clean City Clara elementary school program, "Talking Trash" is an environmental education program designed for middle school audiences. Based on current middle school science standards, the program focuses on proper waste management, stormwater drainage, marine debris and its impacts on the marine environment, and most importantly, constructive actions students can take to help create a cleaner, more beautiful Charleston.

The program is offered free of charge to middle schools in Charleston. To schedule "Talking Trash" for your students please contact us via email at cleancityintern@charleston-sc.gov.
