I am happy now to host this esteemed delegation in Charleston. I hope they enjoy their visit here as much as I Sandy and I enjoyed our visit to their fine city.”

The connection between Flers and Charleston dates back to World War II. In 1948, Charleston resident William Montgomery Bennett organized a grassroots movement and collected over 120 tons of materials to be shipped to Flers, located in the Normandy region, to help reinvigorate the town which had been devastated by the war. The effort became known as the “Medway Plan.”

To honor Charleston and show its appreciation, Flers named a town square the Place Du Charleston, or “Charleston Place.”
To renew the friendship between the cities, Flers hosted a delegation from Charleston in 2014 that included now Mayor Tecklenburg and City Councilmember Bill Moody, during which they held a rededication of Charleston Place.

On Thursday, March 2, Mayor Tecklenburg will hold a plaque dedication ceremony with members of the delegation to recognize the “Medway Plan.” The ceremony will be held at 9 a.m., at the intersection of N. Adgers Wharf and Concord Street, the southern edge of Waterfront Park.
