

City Council, 1783-1951<sup>1</sup>

The 1783 charter of the City of Charleston divided the city into thirteen wards, each represented by a warden elected annually during the first week in September. Voters chose an intendant from among the elected wardens to act as the chief administrative official. After 1808, the intendant was elected separately from the wardens. In 1836 the title of mayor replaced that of intendant and alderman that of warden. This arrangement continued until 1975 when the title of council member replaced that of alderman.

<sup>1</sup> The majority of data regarding council members and aldermen was culled from Yearbooks for the City of Charleston, South Carolina, 1880-1951. For more information on council members and aldermen prior to 1882 see: "Municipal Officers of the City of Charleston, 1783-1882," in Year Book 1881: City of Charleston, South Carolina (Charleston: The News and Courier Book Presses, 1882), 367-377. Where possible, other sources including newspapers and secondary sources were referenced to fill gaps in the available data.

<sup>2</sup> The City Yearbook, 1881 left Wards 10 and 13 blank, while an article published in the South-Carolina Weekly Gazette indicated "votes equal" in Ward 10, without listing the names of the candidates, and that no election was held in Ward 13. <sup>7</sup> John Dawson, Jr. resigned July 1808. Benjamin Boyd completed his unexpired term.

<sup>8</sup> Following the election held on September 5, 1808, members of City Council called for new elections in Wards 3, 6, and 13 after declaring the original election results illegal. In the new election held September 19, 1808 Thomas Roper defeated John Egleston in Ward 3 while John Geddes and Charles Rutledge withheld challenges to their election. In Ward 7, voters chose John Strohecker to replace William Rouse after his selection as intendant. <sup>9</sup> In 1810, an ordinance passed by City Council repartitioned the city into four wards. Three wardens represented Ward 1, which extended from Queen Street to South Bay, west of Meeting Street. Two wardens represented Ward 2, which extended from Queen Street to South Bay on the eastern side of Meeting Street. Three wardens represented Ward 3, which occupied the area between Boundary Street (now Calhoun) and Queen Street, on the western side of Meeting Street. Four wardens represented Ward 4, which occupied the area south of the intersection of Cumming's Creek, Boundary, Vanderhorst, and Hutson Streets on the eastern side of Meeting Street. <sup>26</sup> On February 15, 1865, Confederate troops withdrew from Charleston and Mayor P.C. Gaillard surrendered the city to Union forces. Military officials partly reinstated civilian rule in January 1866 when Mayor Gaillard and the City Council resumed their duties. In lieu of elections, they remained in office until February 20, 1868, when General Canby made a series of political appointments.

<sup>27</sup> J.G. Milnor resigned December 5, 1865. J. Ravenel Macbeth was elected December 20, 1865. Macbeth resigned May 22, 1866 and was succeeded by W.T. Wragg on June 20, 1866.

<sup>28</sup> Thomas Ryan resigned June 5, 1866. S.G. Courtenay succeeded Ryan, but died on April 2, 1868. General Edward R.S. Canby appointed William McKinlay to fill the vacancy. William McKinlay became the first African-American Council Member to hold office in Charleston.

<sup>29</sup> J.W. Brown died April 2, 1866. James Cosgrove was elected to complete the unexpired term.

<sup>30</sup> J.P. Earle died September 23, 1867. General Canby appointed Niles G. Parker to take Earle's place.

<sup>33</sup> H.B. Olney was elected to fill the vacancy caused by E. Willis' removal to Ward 4.
